Magdeburg, July 1. General Laudohn having been repuls'd with great Loſs, in an Aſſault which he ventured to make upon Glatz the Night between the 17th and 18th, left but a ſmall Number of Troops before that Place, and march'd in order to attack the Corps under the Command of General Fouquet. The latter, who was deſirous of maintaining the Poſt at Landſhut, from whence he had juſt diſlodg'd the Generals Geiſrugg and Jahnus, took all Meaſures immediately for making a good Defence. He was obliged, however, to ſend off Major General Ziethen with four Battalions and two Squadrons towards Frauenſtein, in order to preſerve a Communication with Schweidnitz, as well as Major General Grant, on the other Side, with ſome Cavalry; ſo that there were but few Generals left with him, and Part of his Corps, of which the Whole was already in itſelf but weak.

The 23d, at Two o'Clock in the Morning, General Laudohn, with all his Forces, attacked all the Redoubts which General Fouquet occupied near Landſhut, and carried three of them, viz. thoſe on the Heights of Mummel, Beuch, and Blaſſdorf, after a very vigorous Defence on the Part of the five Battalions that guarded them. Amongſt others, one of Moſel's Battalions diſtinguiſhed itſelf extremely on this Occaſion.

General Fouquet, having then thrown himſelf into the two Redoubts, which he had ſtill in his Poſſeſſion, upon the Heights of Kirchberg and Galgenberg, was twice ſummoned on the Part of General Laudohn to ſurrender with his People, which he refuſed complying with. In conſequence whereof, he was attacked with great Fury by the Enemy, who by their ſuperior Force penetrated at laſt into the Redoubts, which had been defended till Six o'Clock. General Fouquet fell there into the Hands of the Enemy, after having received two Wounds; but Part of his Infantry, and almoſt all the Cavalry, made their Way, and got to Breſlau.

Major General Ziethen likewiſe, upon the Approach of the Enemy, threw himſelf into Schweidnitz, with his four Battalions and two Squadrons, without the Loſs of a ſingle Man. This Affair, however unfortunate, cannot but do great Honour to General Fouquet, for having defended his Poſt with the utmoſt Bravery, though he had but a Handful of Men, oppoſed to an Army, which, as the Enemy themſelves have declared, conſiſted of 50,000, and did not yield till after having occaſioned as great a Loſs, as they would have ſuffered by a Defeat in a pitched Battle. According to Accounts received from the Auſtrians themſelves, they have had near 6000 Men killed in the Affair, and almoſt double that Number wounded, which is the more credible, as Marſhal Daun has found himſelf obliged to detach five Regiments of Infantry and two of Cavalry from his own Army towards the County of Glatz, upon the News of this Action.

By Letters from Prince Henry's Head Quarters at Landſberg, upon the Wartha, of the 27th of June, we learn, that his Royal Highneſs having detached

ſome Troops towards Pomerania, Lieutenant-Colonel Loſſow fell in with the Rear Guard of General Tottleben there, conſiſting of Grenadiers and Coſſacks, and killed upwards of Fifty of them, and made One Major, One Lieutenant, and One Hundred and Forty-eight Men Priſoners: He has alſo taken a great Number of Horſes and Bread Waggons from the Enemy.

Extract of a Letter from Breſlaw, dated 28 June, 1760. Excluſive of the Two ſmall Corps, which were detached from that of General Fouquet, one under the Command of Major General Zeithen, and the other under that of Major General Grant, different Detachments of thoſe who happily eſcaped on the 23d of June, are ſucceſſively coming into this Capital, by forcing their Way through the Enemy: The Number conſiſts of 2000 Foot, 150 Dragoons, and 500 Huſſars, who have paſſed through the Towns of Jauer and Newarck, on their Way thither. The ſame Advices add, that it was reported, that a conſiderable Number of Burghers had been put to the Sword by the Auſtrians upon the taking of Landſhut.

The Auſtrians have not attempted any Thing elſe ſince the Action of the 23d, but continue encamped near Schwartzwalde, where they are preparing for beſieging Glatz in Form. In the mean While, it is affirmed from good Authority, that they have made a ſecond Aſſault upon that Town, from whence they have been repulſed with great Lois.

From the King of Pruſſia's Camp at Gros-Dobritz in Saxony, July 1. We are informed, that his Majeſty is to begin his March this Night, and that he intends making it by the Road that leads to Sileſia.

Admiralty-Office, July 12, 1760.

The King having been pleaſed to appoint the following Gentlemen to be Officers in His Marine Forces, it is the Direction of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, that the Second Lieutenants, hereafter named, do immediately repair to this Office, where Commiſſions will be delivered to ſuch of them as ſhall be approved of: After which, they are to repair to the reſpective Head Quarters of the Companies to which they belong, unleſs they are commanded elſewhere by their ſuperior Officers.
